FaithTrust INSTITUTE

ANNUAL REPORT
2011-2012

Working together to end
sexual & domestic violence

“Sexual and domestic violence happens in all our communities—it crosses ethnic and cultural lines and religious communities. It exists at all levels of education and regardless of age...It is a fact of life in all our communities. Faith is fundamental to confronting this reality. Faith should be part of the solution, not part of the problem—a resource and not a roadblock.”

-Rev. Dr. Marie M. Fortune

For more than 35 years, FaithTrust Institute has continued to envision a world where abuse is not tolerated, religious communities are trustworthy, and justice and healing are truly experienced.

MESSAGE TO OUR COMMUNITY

Dear Friends,

I am pleased to present FaithTrust Institute's 2011-2012 Annual Report. As is our history for 35 years, we equip people of faith to be part of the solution to end violence and abuse. Our work is constant and ever-expanding as we seek to find new ways to make a lasting impact on individuals, families, and faith communities.

We launched enhanced webinar and online trainings, with a strong emphasis on providing the necessary tools, solutions, and resources for engaging in a coordinated community response. Our expansive webinar offerings were due in large part to partnerships with the Lutheran Community Foundation and the United Church of Christ. Both organizations sponsored these online trainings and roundtable conversations, making it possible for us to offer sessions to participants at no cost.

Our founder, Rev. Dr. Marie M. Fortune as well as our contract trainers traveled to 27 states, including Ohio, Texas, Illinois, Utah, Massachusetts, Maine, California, Florida, and Minnesota, to name a few, conducting trainings of particular interest including a Multi-Faith Symposium on Trauma and Violence and an Elder Abuse Faith Summit. Rev. Dr. Fortune also traveled to Iceland, Belgium and Canada to present trainings. We conducted our prevention training for faith leaders, "Teaching Healthy Boundaries," and our intervention training, "Responding to Clergy Misconduct."

This year we relocated our Seattle office, moving two miles south of our previous location of 10 years. Even with a new location, you can always find us at www.faithtrustinstitute.org.

We deeply appreciate the advocates, victims/survivors, lay and community leaders, clergy, and denominational leaders who continue to support and strengthen our important work. We could not achieve our mission without you.

Thomas K. Chu, President
Board of Directors

OUR SERVICES

FaithTrust Institute provides multifaith and religion-specific intervention and prevention training, consulting, and educational materials for national, state, and community faith-based and secular organizations in the following areas:

- Domestic and Sexual Violence
- Healthy Teen Relationships and preventing Teen Dating Violence
- Child Abuse; Children and Youth Exposed to Domestic Violence
- Healthy Boundaries for Clergy and Spiritual Teachers; Responding to Clergy Misconduct
- Trafficking of Persons

During 2011-2012, FaithTrust Institute trained over 2,275 advocates, lay and community leaders, clergy, and denominational leaders in 27 states and in 6 countries.

WHO WE ARE

Our values of equality and justice call us to celebrate the dignity and worth of each human being, and to affirm the right of each person to live without fear or threat of violence.

We believe:

- Sexual and domestic violence violate the rights and dignity of all women, men and children. To the extent that any person is violated by sexual and domestic violence, the dignity and worth of all persons are diminished.
- Oppression is deeply ingrained in our society and all forms of oppression including racism, sexism, classism, anti-Semitism, ageism, heterosexism and oppression of the differently abled increase the suffering caused by sexual and domestic violence. Sexual and domestic violence are often instruments of these forms of oppression.
- All those without power and privilege are the most vulnerable to and the most likely to be victimized by sexual and domestic violence.
- Ending sexual and domestic violence requires changing attitudes and practices of individuals, communities, and institutions.
- Organized religious communities have an ethical responsibility to play a major role in bringing about an end to sexual and domestic violence within their own communities and within society at large.

Our Mission

FaithTrust Institute provides faith communities and advocates with the tools and knowledge they need to address the faith and cultural issues related to abuse.

Our Vision

FaithTrust Institute envisions a world where all persons are free from violence in relationships, faith is fundamental to ending violence, religious institutions create a climate in which abuse is not tolerated; faith communities become sanctuaries of safety, worthy of our trust; and all of us experience justice and healing in our communities.

“What must congregations do to join in the struggle to end domestic violence? If we care about families, we must hear and support victims. We must hold batterers accountable. We must support religious leaders who say it is wrong and we will not tolerate it. We will stand with secular agencies to fight against it and we will teach our children about the equality and mutuality of loving relationships. Then and only then will peace and justice have a chance to live in all our homes.”
